CARMEL VALLEY, CALIF.

DECEMBER, 1972

WHAT IS SO CLEAR as a mountain stream in winter, coursing in crystalline beauty over grey-white rocks, nipping at gnarled roots as it plunges ever downward to the sea. The annual resurgence of the Carmel River is more than a visual delight. For each drop of icy water carries with it the promise of new life and beauty in the spring. Photo by George T.C. Smith

TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

I am a Carmel Valley resident and also a businessman in Carmel Valley Village who lives on so-called flood plain. I am totally against the proposed flood plain zoning being pushed through by the CVPOA. This organization says they represent the people of Carmel Valley and the good of the people of Carmel Valley. The CVPOA certainly does not represent me or anything good for me as a property owner, resident and businessman in Carmel Valley by flood plain zoning.

First, under the flood plain zoning if my house was destroyed by wind, fire, water or any means I could NOT rebuild my house unless I brought my property up to flood standards which are being imposed on all the large developers who plan to build on flood plain. What happens to us, "the little guy?" What happens is confiscation of my property. That's what. If I can't afford to bring my property up to flood plain standards being imposed on us, what can I do? I have to relocate somewhere else. What happens to my property value.

I bought this property with an open mind, knowing I have a possibility of flooding and I know everyone else that lives on flood plain knows this too. We've all been happy living this way and I for one don't need self styled "do-gooders" like the CVPOA telling me what's good for me because of their own selfish and misguided reasons. I have yet to talk to one single person who owns property on flood plain or lives on flood plain who is for this imposition. Anyone who is for this is badly misinformed as to what flood plain zoning really is. The first time it was brought up it was turned down county wide. Now the CVPOA is bringing it up again because they want to stop all further natural development and economic growth in Carmel Valley. They surely do not have the good of the resident or owner of flood plain in mind.

I offer the CVPOA a direct challenge to show me how this flood plain zoning will benefit the property owner and resident of flood plain in Carmel Valley.

Sincerely,
JACK W. BELANGEE

Dear Editor:

A meaningful population control program for dogs and cats in Monterey County is long overdue. A three part program is needed. A low cost spay and neuter surgery alone will not bring about the needed drastic reduction of surplus kittens and puppies born in Monterey County daily—a high license fee for "intact" animals and strong law enforcement are also needed.

Your Humane Society, the S.P.C.A. handled 905 animals in 1966, by the end of 1972 we will have handled approximately 16,000. 94 out of every 100 animals will not find a home—they are the unwanted surplus. The County Pound at Marina, the Salinas Pound, Veterinarians and private individuals have been forced to handle and destroy many more.

Estimate that 36,000 surplus dogs and cats will have been killed in Monterey County alone by the end of 1972.

Permitting this sad and unnecessary destruction to continue—a definite form of pollution and a monstrous form of cruelty—is nothing short of criminal negligence!

This is a community problem—it is created by the people of Monterey County by irresponsibly permitting their animals to breed and produce this surplus.

The County now spends over $100,000 a year to deal with the problem of collecting and destroying these surplus animals. How much more intelligent to use funds for prevention rather than destruction.

Solving this problem is the responsibility of the Community (the County)—it is not the responsibility of a small private, charitable organization such as the S.P.C.A., nor is it the responsibility of the men and women who happened to choose Veterinarian Medicine as their profession—our Veterinarians—they are in business to make a living just as any other professional person is. It is certainly not their responsibility to sacrifice their income to cope with a community created problem any more than it is the responsibility of any other professional group of individuals in the Community. We who are trying to help animals are grateful for the help they can and do give to animals but this surplus is a community problem which must be dealt with at the County level.

Using funds to implement a good population control program will in the long run result in a saving rather than the exorbitant increase which will occur by 1980 unless a strong program of prevention is started now.

The S.P.C.A. has prepared a very workable plan for a meaningful population control program. This has been presented to the Board of Supervisors with a request that it be acted upon as soon as possible.

All the people of Monterey County may help by urging the Board of Supervisors to take positive action in this matter without delay.

We must put an end to this needless killing and the consequent use of tax monies to support a program of destruction, when it could so easily be a program of prevention instead.

Sincerely,
GWENDOLYN R. MAY

Shopping period is holiday for criminals also, Younger warns

The period through New Year's Day are "Danger Days" in California for shoppers, merchants, automobile drivers, and pedestrians, but they are "holidays" for criminals, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger said in launching a campaign to alert residents of the State.

"In fact," continued the State's chief law officer, "everyone should be aware of the dangers during the holiday season."

Shoppers, for example, he remarked, are particularly prone to becoming victims of crimes because many persons are making purchases for the holidays.

"This means that pickpockets and shoplifters are particularly active at this time of the year, and certain precautions can be taken by shoppers to avoid thefts and other dangers."

Younger offered these suggestions for Carmel shoppers:

1. Always place your purchases in the automobile trunk, not on the floor or seat of your car.
2. Always lock your car and close the windows.
3. Always hold your purchases tightly so they cannot be taken while you are walking on the street or in a store.

4. Hold on to your purse, so that it can't be taken.

5. If you use a charge plate, always remember to get it back from the sales clerk.

In launching the state-wide campaign, Younger said, "individuals need to know how best to guard against criminal assaults and frauds, and to know what public services are available in the way of legal information and other assistance."

The public can "help combat crime by assuming individual responsibility and by helping to educate others. Law enforcement needs the public's cooperation."

Businessmen, he continued, "also need to know how best to guard against shoplifting, employee theft, bad checks and civil disturbances, and to know what steps can be taken to minimize the multi-million dollar losses which occur each year as a result of these crimes."

"In addition, businessmen should be familiar with the law and the problems involved in prosecution of these crimes."

THE ORGANIC GARDENER

... in Carmel Valley

By LEE HALL

MICROFLORA OF THE ROOT ZONE

THE BOOK Soil Microorganisms and Higher Plants by N.A. Krasilnikov, translated from Russian by the Office of Technical Services, contains some interesting observations, most of which are backed up by scientific experiments. It contains 478 pages of very fine print so observations reported here will not contain experimental evidence, but if the evidence is lacking we will not put the results down without a comment. All information in this column will be from the book unless otherwise indicated.

We mentioned several times that the first year's organic gardening was usually disappointing, and attributed it to incomplete decomposition of the organics and lack of earthworm activity. The book proves that microflora (bacteria, actinomycetes, fungi, algae) are necessary to break down a number of the nutrients in the rocks and soil such as phosphates, zinc, iron and calcium. Without bacterial action these elements and others are not available for plant use but remain "bound" in insoluble form. Plant roots have the ability to concentrate these bacteria in the root zone—"on the rhizosphere (root zone) of beets, 427 million bacteria per gram were found, while in the control soil only 8.2 million per gram were found."

The bacteria were originally in the organic material in the soil. Plants have no ability to concentrate bacteria unless some are already there for the plant to use. Plant roots also furnish protection for the bacteria. The same amount of poison (formalin) that killed all the bacteria in a soil sample without plant roots did not decrease the bacteria count in the same amount of soil with a plant growing in it. The same amount of poison put into a sterile soil sample of the same size with a plant growing in it killed the plant. His conclusion is that bacteria and plants are mutually protective against some poisons.

Plants in sterile soil that tested adequate for all nutrients grew to roughly half the size of those planted in organic soil with the same nutrient figures. We mentioned earlier that we grew beautiful plants in organic soil that tested low in nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium, etc.

"The poorer the soil in organic substances, the less fertile it is, and the weaker is the influence of the root system on the quantitative composition of the microflora of the rhizosphere" (root zone) "In the deep layers of soil there are usually very few bacteria, while in the rhizosphere of plants, even at the depth of two to three meters, they grow abundantly...the maximal number of bacteria is observed during the period of the most active growth of the plant."

"When soils in the rhizosphere are analyzed after harvest, one can observe that the activity of microorganisms does not cease. In the presence of moisture and higher soil temperatures, a sharp increase in the number of microbes in the root zone is observed. In this case, the dead roots are subjected to intense decomposition. Differences in the quantitative composition of microbes in the rhizosphere of different plants are slight."

"...one finds indications that microbial cells are present not only on the surface of (living) roots but also inside them, having penetrated the tissue of the epidermis, the intercellular substance, and also the protoplasm of the cells themselves." The author did not agree entirely with this last statement and neither do we.

We do not think bacteria can penetrate healthy intact tissue; possibly some viruses can penetrate some intact tissues. All one has to do is put a pin hole in an apple and in a very few days the apple will begin to rot at the pin hole while the rest of the intact skin of the apple will remain in a healthy condition. The plant has to be dead or injured, usually, for bacterial invasion to occur. That's why we chop up plant material to make 14 day compost. We injure the surface of leaves, rinds, etc. to allow faster penetration by bacteria.

I hope my two readers appreciate these gems. I'm going blind trying to read the fine print in this book. If the same two readers wonder why I use we all the time, it's for a very good reason. If it weren't for the fine editorial staff who rewrite my ramblings into understandable English, there wouldn't be any column. I'm like the track coach at Ohio State U. who said to Jesse Owens when he enrolled there, "Jesse, if you stay here four years, I'll be a great coach." If those girls stay with me, I'll be a great writer.

ZIP NUMBERS URGED IN HOLIDAY MAILING

Zip Coded addresses will help assure that holiday greetings arrive in the mails on time, Postmaster Joe Fischer reminded residents here today.

"Heavy mailings at year's end mean Zip numbers are particularly important," Fischer said. "The Postal Service is anxious to make certain that cards, letters and parcels arrive at their destination on time...and Zip numbers are essential."

Out-of-town mail is best sent air mail, he said. The mail should be posted before 4:30 p.m. at the Carmel Valley post office and by 3:45 at the Postal substation (Steinmetz Pharmacy) in Mid-Valley.

Local telephone directories have in-town Zip Code numbers, or residents may contact their nearest post office for Zip Code information.

"In addition to outgoing Zip Codes, return addresses should include the sender's Zip number," Fischer added.

Seek rezoning for industrial use

Cement plant may relocate on Wolters' property

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Planning Commission's one December meeting, on Wednesday, Dec. 20, will include two new applications involving relocation of Y.R. Azcarate's cement batch plant and expansion of Riverside Park in mid-Carmel Valley.

Azcarate has applied for rezoning on 2½ acres owned by Luis Wolter to enable him to relocate his cement batch plant adjacent to the Carmel River. The site is not visible from Carmel Valley Road and has been used recently as a campground and storage area for trailers.

Azcarate was recently denied an extension of his variance allowing him to continue operating in Roach Canyon. The variance was turned down by Zoning Administrator Bob Slimmon on the grounds that State law now forbids issuing a variance for a use not otherwise permitted by existing zoning. The supervisors upheld this ruling.

According to Slimmon, Wolter's property would have to be rezoned from one-acre residential to industrial use (M) to allow this type of use.

Riverside Park, the focus of protracted debate a year ago, hopes to double its operation to a maximum of 20 trailer sites and 20 camp sites.

The expansion is sought by Nick Nedelcove, who purchased the 3½ acre campground at the end of Schulte Road, below Saddle Mountain Ranch, several months ago.

In June, 1971, the owner at that time, Jesse West, asked the county for a use permit that would allow 24 trailers and 23 tent sites on the land.

After several hearings, the planning commission finally set the maximum density at 10 trailers and 10 tent sites.

IN ACTION LAST WEEK, the planning commission denied design approval for a one-story restaurant and office building which Larry Cummings proposes to build on Delfino place in the Village.

Commissioners had first been going to continue their discussion of design approval to Dec. 20 but when Cummings objected to the delay, they voted to deny approval. Cummings was told to submit a revised drawing to the Upper Valley Advisory Committee.

On another matter, commissioners approved rezoning and a tentative subdivision map for Carmel Views No. 4 to allow 71 building sites on 98 acres.

Most discussion centered around the plan to connect Outlook Drive as a through street to neighboring High Meadows when the latter subdivision is completed in another two years.

The connection was strongly opposed by the Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Assn. Spokesman Ken McGinnis said that making Outlook Drive a through street would sharply increase traffic along previously residential roads, since cars would be able to turn off Carmel Valley Road and drive north, connecting with Highway 1 above the Carpenter St. light.

Commissioners approved the road connection, but until High meadows is completed, there will be a non-access strip between the two subdivisions.

SQUAW VALLEY WEST? Frigid temperatures brought sleet, hail and a generous coating of ice to Carmel Valley this week. All that was missing in our winter wonderland was snow. But photographer George T.C. Smith found a reasonable facsimile thereof when the fountain in the Mid-Valley Shopping Center billowed forth with misplaced soapsuds. While it was pretty to look at, the foaming suds were a menace to plant life and a royal mess to clean up.

Carmel schools not making special effort to hire minority teachers

By PAT GRIFFITH

CARMEL Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor said this week he doubted that the Carmel school district would adopt an "affirmative action program" aimed at hiring more teachers and administrators from racial minority groups.

"The district's policy has always been to hire the best candidate for the job, regardless of race," Taylor said. "Certainly if we can find a qualified candidate through our regular screening process who is a minority person, we have no compunction about employing him."

"We have offered a contract to a black teacher in the past, but she became pregnant a month later and decided not to teach."

Taylor's comments came in response to an announcement by the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District that it has increased the number of employees representing ethnic and racial minority groups by seven percent in the past year.

In November, 1971, the MPUSD adopted an affirmative action plan, pledging to step up hiring of persons from minority groups until the number of minority employees is in proportion with the ethnic makeup of the community.

According to the 1970 Census figures, 26 percent of the residents within the MPUSD, which includes Monterey and Seaside, are members of minority ethnic groups.

As of October, 1972, the MPUSD has 31 minority group teachers, or 14.8 percent of the certificated staff. On the district's classified staff, 31.2 percent were members of minority groups.

The Carmel school district, which covers an almost all-white community, has no black teachers or administrators, although it does have several black classified employees.

It employs "one or two" teachers who are Chicanos, and has, in the past, had teachers of other racial backgrounds.

TAYLOR SAID that even with an "affirmative action" program, Carmel would have a hard time competing with urban school districts in hiring top-quality minority teachers.

As an example, he said that last year the city of San Diego hired only minority teachers for new positions, giving them preference over white teacher candidates. These teachers were hired at a higher salary than normally offered beginning white teachers, Taylor said, and were assured of faster advancement.

Taylor said the same thing is happening in many other school districts which are under pressure to meet certain racial percentages.

Because Carmel sets very high standards for all its teachers, Taylor said, it could be faced with hiring a "second cut" applicant if it establishes a specific goal of minority employment.

Another aspect of the hiring picture, Taylor continued, is that minority students who graduate in education from top-ranked colleges and universities, such as Stanford, are wooed by graduate schools which have funding for minority programs.

For instance, Taylor said, Claremont College has a graduate program for minority group members who have been successful in fields other than education and retrain them to be school superintendents.

Thus the calibre of applicant Carmel is seeking, Taylor said, is the type of person who would be accepted for special graduate programs which would lead straight to high-paying administrative jobs.

Despite all these handicaps, Taylor said that the CUSD will continue to keep "lines of communication open" and will continue to judge every applicant on his or her professional merits, without racial bias.

THE COMMUNITY CENTER Flag Football Season ended on Saturday with the season standings showing the mighty RAIDERS -- co-captained by Rick Hindman and Matt Nottenkamper in first place; the FORTY NINERS and the COWBOYS locked in a second place tie; and the ROADRUNNERS in fourth.

Asked to comment on the season, Coach Herb Reuter stated: "The final day for the '72 Flag Football Season was ushered out in true football weather -- the air was crisp and the players were all eager for the games to begin."

Forty-four Tularcitos players participated during the season -- all of whom deserve the highest praise for their good sportsmanship and aggressive play. Making a few comparisons with the "football elite" -- viewers of the season might note similarities as follows:

RAIDERS: Miami Dolphins (consistent play by unsung heroes).

FORTY NINERS: S.F. 49ers (on any given day a winner, but plagued by missing key players).

COWBOYS: Dallas (a contention team, but had quarterback hardships due to illness).

ROADRUNNERS: New England Patriots (moments of glory, but offense never quiet jelled).

The Championship awards were presented at the annual flag football banquet held this year in the Tularcitos cafeteria.

Susan E. Lee, long-time piano accompanist at the Patricia Wester Studio of Dance Arts in Carmel Valley, died in a Carmel convalescent hospital Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Lee, 59, lived in Carmel at First Ave. and Santa Rita Sts.

A native of Kansas, she moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1938. From that time until her recent illness, she was the pianist for the First Theater in Monterey.

For the past 18 years, she has also been the accompanist for all the dance classes taught by Patricia Wester. She had a rare ability to play music appropriate to any dance step, altering tempo and tune to suit the age and ability level of students. Through the years, hundreds of children have first learned to recognize musical rhythms with her patient assistance at the keyboard.

Although hospitalized for cancer several times this past year, she continued to play at the studio whenever she felt up to the drive to the Village.

Mrs. Lee is survived by her daughter, Nancy, of Carmel; a sister, Mrs. June Carter and a brother, Vaughn Duvall, both of Pacific Grove.

Private funeral services and cremation have been scheduled at Little Chapel-by-the-Sea.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the American Cancer Society, P.O. Box 1028, Monterey.

IT WAS DORIS GATES DAY at Carmelo School Wednesday, as the popular author and story-teller from Carmel Highlands captivated young listeners with tales from Greek mythology. Here she autographs a book for little Karin Gray.

A former children's librarian, she has written 25 books and conducts classes for teachers on the vanishing art of story-telling.

Photos by George T.C. Smith

CARMELO STUDENTS crowd close to talk to Doris Gates as she autographs copies of her latest books, "Zeus, Lord of the Sky," and "Athena, the Warrior Goddess." Eager to hear

What impact will new property tax relief bill have on Carmel schools?

CARMEL SCHOOL OFFICIALS are waiting to get a copy of the $1.1 billion school finance and property tax relief bill passed by the State legislature last week before coming to any conclusions about its impact on the district.

Superintendent of Schools Harris Taylor said he hopes to have information in time to present a report to the school board at its next meeting on Dec. 13.

Taylor said it is his general impression that the bill will not have a "major impact" locally for a "couple of years," but he emphasized that he has not yet seen a final version of SB 90, the Reagan-Moretti bill which cleared the State Senate at its final session on Friday.

The legislation will reduce property taxes while raising the State sales tax one cent starting June 1. Business and corporation taxes will also be raised.

Overall, the state will put an additional $561 million into public schools. Most of this money will go to city and low-wealth school districts.

The "early childhood education" program, backed by State Supt. of Public Instruction Wilson Riles, will receive $25 million.

Taylor said that one key aspect of this plan, to extend elementary education to four-year-olds, was deleted from the final bill.

What is left, Taylor said, is a provision to reorganize the kindergarten through second grade program to provide more individual instruction and a stronger foundation in reading.

Individual school districts could apply for early childhood funds by presenting a project to Sacramento for approval.

Taylor said that the general K-2 program in the Carmel district seems to be pretty close to what the State is looking for in "pilot projects" in other school districts.

"I think the overall idea of putting more money into the early primary grades is a sound one, particularly if some districts that have had low funding can get help to reduce class sizes and put more aides into the classroom," Taylor said.

"The whole purpose is to put money into the early grades so you don't have to undertake massive remedial programs later on. Remedial programs have never been very successful.

"This has been the whole emphasis of what we have done here in the past few years."

Taylor said it is possible that Carmel might apply for funding for a special project in the K-2 area "if we find there's something we want to do that we haven't been doing."

But realistically, he said, it appears that Carmel would be less likely to have a project approved than urban school districts in which class sizes are much larger and available programs more limited.

'Primitive ikonography' of Father Buckley at Village Artistry

Father Michael D. Buckley will be the featured artist at the Village Artistry Show at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School in 1970. Presently serving as assistant pastor at Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in Santa Ana, California, Father Buckley has exhibited his works in New York, Quebec, San Diego, Los Angeles, as well as the Monterey Peninsula.

A longtime visitor to the Peninsula, Father Buckley has exhibited in Monterey, Carmel Valley and his painting the "21 California Mission Saints and Father Junipero Serra" was a principle feature of the seventh annual Religious Art Show at the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School in 1970.

The gallery will also feature a large collection of small works of art suitable for Christmas giving. Some of the artist whose works will be included in this special exhibit are: W.F. Stone, Jr., Miguel Dominguez, Jeanne Bellmer, Endre Peter Darvas, John Mendoza, Jeanne Ocker, Jerry Schwartz, Ann Berthoin and others.

The gallery is located on Dolores, south of Ocean.

FATHER BUCKLEY holds a vested crucifix of his own design.

SOME OF THE LEADING members of the cast of Hidden Valley's 'Pirates of Penzance,' which opens tonight (Thursday) at Sunset Theatre pose during rehearsals. Director Michael Keller (foreground), who will play the Major General is flanked by

Hidden Valley financial crisis continues

"The immediate situation is bleak," says Peter Meckel, executive dean of Hidden Valley Music Seminars. The telethon last Saturday and Sunday on MPTV-Channel 13 did "very poorly. I believe it was a problem of people not knowing that the telethon was on. Only $852 was pledged."

Beneath this terse explanation of a critical situation lies a great dream, a history of intense and joyful education, and performance in the fields of music and theater, and a tradition of free concerts, as a tribute of thanks to the community which has in the past so generously supported Hidden Valley Music Seminars productions.

For Meckel, the stakes are so high, the outcome of this month's fund raising so important, that words can hardly contain the importance of the crisis. At this time, money means life for Hidden Valley.

A second fund-raising event was yesterday's champagne preview opening of Pirates of Penzance. Other productions this month by Hidden Valley will be Dickens' Christmas Carol, on Dec. 22 and 23 and the annual holiday reunion concert on Dec. 29, both at Sunset Center.

Ironically, the individual programs (Theatre Division, Magic Carpet Children's Theater, Music Seminars) are now paying their own way, but the cost of moving HVMS to their new campus at the White Oaks Theater in Carmel Valley and constructing a dormitory there for the summer Music Seminars has saddled Hidden Valley with an $80,000 deficit.

Meckel is worried about finances, but "really excited" about the current production Pirates of Penzance. "It's more sophisticated than our previous productions," Meckel says, "the music is more difficult. We have outstanding singers, a great orchestra."

We have traveled across the world to bring you beautiful, small paintings at beautiful, small prices . . . that make beautiful great gifts for Christmas giving!

A TOUCH OF NEW ORLEANS on the Monterey Peninsula is the Hidden Village Coffee House, tucked in a little alley off Scott Street in Monterey (just a block down the hill from California's First Theatre). Owner, Robin Roberts and partner, Melea Gomes, have given this area landmark a "new" look with a decor reminiscent of New Orleans. This delightful out-of-the-way spot offers lunch, Sunday brunch, and dinner, as well as an impressive list of exotic coffees that include such taste-tempting selections as Cafe Borgia, Romano Espresso, Angel's Bosom, and a specialty of the house, Ukranian Coffee (an unusual blend of pure chocolate, coffee and hot milk, served with a drift of whipped cream). Meals at Hidden Village are cooked to order and you'll enjoy the unusual way they present their menus. Weather permitting, there is lunch and Sunday brunch service in their garden court. Actual address is 220 Olivier Street, off Scott Street, between First Theatre and Pacific House in Monterey.

MAXIM'S DELICIOUS HOT BORSCHT, served with sour cream, has been a big favorite during this week's cold spell. For a real gourmet dinner at Maxim, try their Coquille St. Jacques a la Parisienne. The Coquille is prepared in a natural shell, enveloped in a rich cream veloute featuring sweet scallops, a touch of white wine and mornay sauce.

Dessert offerings at Maxim include Brandied Kissel (a Russian pudding), cream cheese cake, or Romavayababa, rum-soaked cake with currants.

FOLK SINGER, DAVID BAUMGARTEN takes the entertainment spotlight Fridays at David Bindel's King's Cross Station in Pacific Grove. Ballads and sea chantys are the song specialties offered by this popular entertainer, who is putting the finishing touches on an album of songs about Cannery Row. The contemporary music of Bob Dylan, James Taylor, Joni Mitchell, and Buffy Ste. Marie is included in the selections offered by Baumgarten.

There is entertainment every night at King's Cross Station. . . Ron Blair on Thursday and Saturday, Steve Uhler (from London) Sunday and Monday, and Chuck Leary on Tuesday and Wednesday.

ROAST GOOSE STUFFED WITH APPLES is just one of the menu selections for Christmas dinner at The Carriage House. A traditional holiday dinner which originated in Germany, roast goose has been a favorite with diners of this country during recent years. Roast Tom Turkey and English Roast Beef will also be on the menu.

The Christmas tree is up at The Carriage House and the ornaments are just what you'd expect to find in this cozy place. Lore and Fritz already have plans for New Year's Day brunch. There'll be favors with New Year's Eve dinner, of course. Lore suggests early reservations.

A NEW GROUP TAKES OVER SATURDAY NIGHT in the lounge at Mike Tancredi's Hatch Cover. . . 3 guys and a gal make up this versatile group which has played recent engagements in Las Vegas, Reno, and Tahoe. A big treat is promised Saturday nighters at this popular steak house and lounge in Carmel Rancho at the entrance to Carmel Valley. Lineup for other nights at the Hatch Cover is Ron Blair on Friday, "Cannery Roll" on Thursday, Steve on Wednesday, and "Friends" on Sunday. On a cold night, order a Hatchcover Coffee. . . a spirited blend served in a jaunty mug, decorated with the Union Jack.

THE LUNCHEON MENU AT RANCHO CANADA offers a specialty of the day, as well as their popular sandwich selection. On Tuesdays it's beef stroganoff. . . especially delicious and served with a glass of California wine. Wednesdays it's beef hash with an egg on top. Good old-fashioned corned beef and cabbage tops the Thursday noon luncheon menu. . . filet of sole is the specialty on Friday. Friday night, of course, is the great prime rib and king crab buffet. . . better make reservations for this Peninsula treat at Rancho Canada.

'Pirates of Penzance'

opens tonight at Sunset

By FRANK H. RILEY, Director
Community and Cultural Activities

WELL, TONIGHT'S the night! "Pirates of Penzance" invade Sunset Center Theatre to remain (with the consent of a small squadron of gallant cops) through Sunday. There will be a performance each evening at 8:15 p.m. with a special Sunday matinee at 2:30 p.m.

Here is a show that everybody can enjoy - be sure to bring the kids for they will like it too. (And how often can you take kids to the theatre now-a-days?) Of course, when you start with Gilbert and Sullivan, you are already on the right track. When you add such voices as those of Glenna De Weese, Abigail Gowaldo, and James Hull, a cast of characters that includes a major general with scads of beautiful daughters in conflict with a band of lusty bachelor pirates, with only a handful of very, very sensitive policemen to keep order, you have an uproar on your hands.

To keep it all in hand, stir in the knowing direction of Mike Keller and the result is a rollicking show of sheer fun and entertainment. Call 624-6911 - get tickets! Remember, there are just five performances - after that it will be too late.

WHEN THE PIRATES set is struck on next Sunday night, Carmelo School moves in with its annual Christmas show. The performance will be at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, the 12th. The public is invited to join parents and friends of the school at this free event. We often hear a lot about what goes on in our schools. Here's an opportunity to observe for yourself and to get some first-hand answers.

Following Carmelo School comes Carmel Youth Center with their annual "Christmas Capers." Performances of this youth-oriented celebration will take place on Saturday, Dec. 16, at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., the same schedule as initiated last year. We notice that many "old grads" and former members of the Center attend the Capers each year. Why not join the fun and renew some old acquaintances?

THERE IS NO DOUBT the joyous Christmas season has started and a lot of the fun and joy emanates from Sunset Center. Remember it is YOUR Center and you are always welcome at all Sunset Center events and programs.

Christmas comes early to Carmel Center

Christmas is coming early to Carmel Center, Rio Road and Highway 1 on Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The mall of the fountains will be a forest of Christmas trees as a backdrop for the children's choir from the Church of the Wayfarer under the direction of Ann Welchner of Carmel.

Mrs. Welchner has been the able director of the 19-voice choir for eight years. The 8-14 year olds have had the advantage of the musicologist who has studied voice "ever since I can remember" in Washington, D.C., Naples, Italy and Tokyo.

The choir will be first accompanied by Bob Walls, organist, of Monterey Music and then they will be accompanied by Sherri Welchner, 17, daughter of Mrs. Welchner. Sherri is a pupil of Miss Angie Machado of Carmel.

The performances of the choir will be at 11:30 and 1:30, although the children will wander through the mall and stores a cappella between performances. Mr. Wall's organ music will continue throughout the day.

For those outside the mall there will be Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus parachuting down on the field adjacent to the entrance to the Center after a long flight from the North Pole.

For those 12 and under who prefer more sedentary entertainment there will be free movies in the Jerry Lewis Cinema. There will be no charge and no tickets will be necessary; however, only little ladies and gentlemen who walk and do not run to the entrance of the theatre will be admitted.

The latest news from the North Pole is that Santa will be on hand the week before Christmas, also, at Carmel Center, walking throughout the mall and shops giving candy canes to the little tots with the big wishes.

Christmas concert at high school Monday

The Carmel High School choir and chamber orchestra will present a Christmas concert Monday at 8 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Henry Avila will be conducting.

There will be no admission charge and the program is open to the public.

THE CHILDREN'S CHOIR of the Church of the Wayfarer will perform at Carmel Center this Saturday under the direction of Ann Welchner. Also on tap Saturday will be Santa Claus (who will arrive by parachute) and free movies for the kiddies at the Jerry Lewis Cinema.

Children's Theatre to offer Medieval play Dec. 17

The experience of Christmas in the Middle Ages will return to the stage of Sunset Theatre this year on Dec. 17, 18 at 8 p.m. and 19 at 3 p.m. when the Children's Experimental Theatre again creates the 600-year old "Towneley Play," part of the Wakefield mystery cycle first performed by simple guildsmen in Wakefield, England.

Originally performed on great lumbering wagon stages moving through the squares of the town, the young actors company production will feature not only wagon stages, but the bustle and excitement of the town itself: a horde of citizens of Wakefield, chatting, hawking food, dancing and playing games, will bridge the interludes between the sections of the sacred drama.

The guildsmen who wrote the plays in English were not learned men, but they loved the stories. Since each section was in the hands of a different Guild, each Guild competed fiercely with the others to make their costumes, scenery and special effects more beautiful than the last.

The audience at Sunset Theatre will again mingle with townspeople, jugglers, apple women and noble kings to celebrate the most wonderful season.

The adaptation is about an hour in length, and is designed to appeal to all adults and school-age children.

Tickets, at $2 for adults and $1 for children, are available at the Thunderbird, Steinmetz Pharmacy, Abinante's, Lily Walker's, Studio Art Supply, Bartlett's, and can be reserved for Sunday or Monday evenings at 8, or Tuesday matinee at 3 p.m. by calling the theatre at 624-1531.

Petpourri

By JUDITH A. EISNER

"WE SIMPLY CANNOT control him," is the reason given too often by distraught dog owners who have decided to give up their pets.

"NEEDS ROOM TO RUN" is another oft-heard excuse for parting with a pet.

"HE'S SO EXCITABLE he wears us out," is a third popular phrase.

And perhaps the worst of all is, "NO MATTER HOW MUCH WE BEAT HIM, it doesn't seem to help."

SOMETHING'S OBVIOUSLY wrong in these cases -- and they are not few or far between. Although there are legitimate reasons for people having to sell or give away their dogs, too many of the times these folk are simply exhausted by the efforts of living with an unholy canine terror.

On the other hand, there are hundreds of thousands of people who select a puppy, raise and train it and live with and love it until its dying day. What's the magic ingredient that makes one dog a joy to own and live with, a loving and loved companion, while another is an uncontrollable, destructive, unresponsive hoodlum who makes your life a hell?

You might ask the same question of young children you know and get some clues there. What makes some children a joy to know and others unwelcome terrors? Why are some children polite, well-mannered, calm and thoughtful while others are not?

If you think about children of your acquaintance, you will probably be forced to throw out the excuse of "heredity." Lovely parents have horrid children and vice versa. Undeniably, heredity plays a part in determining a child's or a dog's character, but the crucial shaping and channeling of these hereditary traits and predispositions comes from training.

PERHAPS it's the recent wave of permissive parenting (now on the wane) that led to permissive puppy-raising. Perhaps it's simply that first-time puppy owners, like first-time parents, are treading gingerly on uncertain ground and bog down in the morass of myths and half-truths interested bystanders shower upon them.

Sadly, too few dog buyers ever add the slight investment of a good, general purpose dog book that might at least point them in the right direction. There don't seem to be many mothers about who don't own a well thumbled "Doctor Spock."

Setting the stage for your future relationship with a new dog begins the moment he sets foot in your house. Dogs, again like babies, are extremely perceptive creatures, even when they're still puppies tripping over their own feet. They "read" people's moods and "vibrations." They pick up fear or nervousness and they are born experts on capitalizing on uncertainty.

Like babies, puppies need consistency more than just about anything else except love. Something that's forbidden once must be, with few exceptions, forbidden forever. You can't let a puppy climb on the couch or chew on a slipper or jump in your lap just once. Since first impressions sink deep, that "just once" occurrence will set a pattern in a young animal's mind that is hard to break.

We hate resorting to dictionary definitions to make a point, but sometimes it's useful to do so. One definition of "to train" is "to lead or direct the growth of," and that definition suits the dog owner's purposes very well. People tend to turn off when they think of training in terms of formalized obedience trial competition. But training a dog for everyday life is really directing its growth.

For this objective, there is really no set of written rules to follow, even as there are no written rules for child raising. Doctor Spock is valuable to mothers because he prepares them for the stages of development a child passes through and suggests methods of handling problems when they arise. He never says "you must do this."

In formalized obedience training -- the heel, come, sit regimen -- there are indeed certain prescribed exercises for a dog to learn. But the best-trained obedience dog in the world can still be a monster in his master's house. It's unlikely, but possible, because although knowing how to come or sit on command is useful for behavior control, it must be applied properly.

As an example, a dog who knows how to lie down and stay in one place can be kept off the furniture or from jumping up on people simply by being told to lie down and stay put. All the owner has to do is transfer the show ring work into practical, everyday applications.

But formal training is not necessary for a dog to be a fine and pleasant companion. It never hurts and it can make life easier, but there are other ways to achieve the same goals.

Expert trainers say the two indispensable ingredients for successful training are patience and praise. You'll probably require more of the former at times. As with children, dogs learn through repetition -- doing a thing over and over and over again. If you lose your patience and "blow it," and show your bad temper by beating the dog, you've not only invalidated any good training, but you've done a destructive thing to your relationship with the dog. (Just like kids, eh?)

So you attack the challenge of training a dog with PATIENCE, love, praise when he's done well, correction in the form of calm, spoken disapproval; with an unhysterical, soothing-but-firm voice, with consistency in your expectations and demands and with the knowledge that repetition liberally mixed with all of the above will eventually work its miracle and you will have a calm, well-behaved dog who's not only nicer to live with but a better dog for your efforts.

Carmel city council nominates Mrs. Gibson to regional coastal commission

In a letter to Governor Ronald Reagan, the Carmel City Council recommended Victoria Gibson of Carmel Valley for appointment as a public representative to the Central Coast Regional Commission for San Mateo, Santa Cruz and Monterey Counties for the implementation of the Coastal Zone Conservation Act — Proposition 20.

The letter, copies of which went to James R. Mills, chairman of the Senate Rules Committee, and Robert Moretti, speaker of the Assembly, was signed by Mayor Bernard Anderson.

It stated that "Mrs. Gibson is a native Californian, and has an intimate knowledge of the area included in the Central Coast Region, having acquired her law degree at Stanford in 1945-47, and has been a resident of San Mateo and Monterey Counties from 1959 to the present.

"As Councilman and Mayor of Carmel, and a member of AMBAG, I have been actively engaged in soil and conservation matters in Monterey County and in the Carmel area particularly. During that time, I have had innumerable occasions to serve with and become familiar with Mrs. Gibson's knowledge and effectiveness in dealing with conservation problems.

"Mrs. Gibson has a keenly analytical mind with the ability to appraise the impact of developmental projects on not only the respective communities, but on the State as well. She also possesses the rare facility of being able to cooperate with conflicting interests and mobilizing public opinion when a course of action has been decided. I have heard her present questions involving conservation, good land use, zoning, density, pollution, water supply, flood plain zoning, and various environmental impact matters before various public bodies.

"Her presentations are factual and concise, and given without belaboring issues, yet never with the addition of half-truths to gain her point. In addition, her opinions as expressed on the subject of Area Planning are listened to and carry weight in the Monterey County area.

"It is seldom that one has the opportunity to recommend an individual for appointment to a public position without any material or mental reservations; it is our pleasure to do so in the case of Mrs. Gibson. Carmel has been proud of the leadership it has provided the State of California in preserving coastline environment, and feels that your acceptance of Mrs. Gibson as a Regional Representative will be an effective step in assuring the success of the Coastal Zone Conservation Act."

The City Selection Committee of Monterey County, composed of the mayors of each of the incorporated cities within the county, also approved Mrs. Gibson's name as one of ten from the county to be recommended to the governor, the Senate Rules Committee and the speaker of the Assembly as candidates for appointment by them. The mayors met in Salinas last Thursday.

Proposition 20, the coastal protection initiative approved by the voters on Nov. 7, provides for a state commission and several regional commissions to set up coastal protection regulations. The Central Coast Regional Commission will embrace the counties of Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Mateo.

Membership on the commission will consist of one member appointed by each of the three county boards of supervisors, one by each of the city selections committees of the three counties, one by the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG), one by the Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG), three by the governor, three by the Senate Rules Committee and two by the speaker of the Assembly.

City council members, during their agenda briefing session Friday morning at City Hall, also endorsed the nomination of Charles B. Kramer, who was recommended by the county supervisors.

The mayor sent a letter to that effect to the governor, the rules committee and the speaker of the assembly.
